

Conserving The King's House: Salisbury Museum for future generations

Louise Salman

Architect Louise Salman will discuss the challenges, opportunities (and many surprises!) in conserving historic architecture and cultural heritage sites.

Giving an insight into the recent works at The King's House, the home of the Salisbury Museum, Louise will explore the approach, materials and traditional techniques required to conserve and adapt the Museum for the next generation.

Louise Salman is an RIBA accredited conservation architect who has led and delivered complex conservation, repair and alteration projects to both secular and ecclesiastical listed buildings of national significance, and has practised both in the UK and abroad.

Louise now lives in Salisbury with her young family and works alongside her architect-husband at Loop Architects in Salisbury.
